When he's not working on client projects, he enjoys an IPA, a BBQ and so on. Our mission is to provide the best graphic design content to the clients. To achieve this goal, we are working very hard to make the site as fast as possible. To cut down all the time we are spending on the server and serve more data.Q: Connect Gmail to an Android app using IMAP I am trying to create an Android app which has an email account through Gmail account and I want to send an email from my account to the app (using my app). I don't want to use any fancy features (e.g. iMessage), I just want to mail my app directly (it is a hobby project). I am using Alon Barboza's code from to set up the IMAP connection. I am successful in setting up the connection and I can read and send emails. My problem is I can only send messages using Gmail but I want to be able to send messages via my gmail from any email which I get in my app (I tried sending it from Gmail to my email, and vice versa). I am aware that I need an HTTP proxy, but I don't know how to connect my app with Gmail. Please help me on this. UPDATE I am successful in connecting to Gmail using IMAP protocol, but when I try to send an email from the Gmail it is always sent from my server mail.gmail.com (which is the actual mail server from Gmail) and not the Google's mail servers. A: Google's official Email API provides various email integration features to integrate with your application. There are also third-party options such as Alon Barboza's libimap but it is not a recommended way to do this as it was built in 2007 and Google has since upgraded the Gmail API and now provides easier to use, features and tools.

A team of researchers from Massachusetts General Hospital in the USA and Leiden University Medical Centre in the Netherlands have created a new tool for studying this type of brain tumour. Their findings, recently published in Nature Genetics, suggest that these are the most common mutations in the common form of glioblastoma. Glioblastoma is the most common and deadly form of brain tumour and its hallmarks include: high proliferation rates, mutation in the TP53 gene, mutations in EGFR and amplification of the epidermal growth factor receptor (EGFR). But there is only a small subset of glioblastomas with known genetic alterations. In this study, the team examined the genomes of several thousand brain tumours, containing a mixture of different glioblastomas. They focused on these that expressed a proliferation marker called Ki-67, which is up-regulated in some glioblastomas. From this, they found only a small number of glioblastomas with a mutation in TP53 (from 5 to 8%). These show a distinct mutation pattern, with only a few mutations distributed in distinct hotspots. Meanwhile, EGFR amplification was the most frequent mutation and was found in 60% of the tumours. One big advantage of studying patients with a glioblastoma is that other
