[Nontuberculous Mycobacteria and Pregnancy: Review of Literature]. The urinary tract and airways are the main target organs for nontuberculous Mycobacteria (NTM). The global increasing of sexually transmitted diseases and xenotransplantations has made the probability of NTM infection higher. The incidence of NTM infection in pregnancy is about 12 per 1,000 births and is increasing. From a clinical point of view, NTM is considered as an atypical pathogen which is associated with severe and refractory disease. NTM infections in pregnant women are more common than in nonpregnant patients and a diagnostic delay may occur. Pregnant women should be monitored carefully for NTM infection. The purpose of this article is to review the NTM infection and pregnancy, including clinical symptoms and diagnostic methods.[Recurrent functional squamous cell carcinoma of the lower lip: a case report]. A 49-year-old male was diagnosed as having recurrence of squamous cell carcinoma (SCC) of the lower lip after treatment with radiotherapy alone. After the second operation, the tumour recurred at the primary site and also the tumour involved the buccal mucosa. Biopsy from the primary site and the buccal mucosa showed SCC. On the basis of the clinical and pathological features, the tumour was diagnosed as a recurrent functional SCC. After a third operation, the patient is now under a follow-up programme. Functional SCC of the lower lip is a relatively rare disease, and has a poor prognosis, but it may be cured by surgery, as well as radiotherapy./ * Copyright (c) 2000, 2009 IBM Corporation and others. * * This program and the accompanying materials * are made available under the terms of the Eclipse Public License 2.0 * which accompanies this distribution, and is available at * * * SPDX-License-Identifier: EPL-2.0 * * Contributors: * IBM Corporation - initial API and implementation / package org.eclipse.jdt.internal.core; import org.eclipse.core.runtime.CoreException; import org.eclipse.core.runtime.IPath; import org.

N-ethylmaleimide (NEM), an inhibitor of nitrite oxidizers, was used to investigate the thiol status of nitrifying bacteria. A dose-dependent inhibition of nitrite oxidation and of nitrite-dependent dithiothreitol (DTT) oxidation was found after treatment of nitrifying sludge with NEM. This inhibition could be reversed by hydroxylamine and dithiothreitol. The extent of the inhibition depended on the concentration of NEM. However, the addition of hydroxylamine or dithiothreitol did not restore the growth of nitrifying bacteria. These results suggest that the inhibition of nitrite oxidation by NEM was due to the oxidation of thiols in nitrite oxidizers. The thiol status of nitrifying bacteria was investigated under different temperature conditions. Significant reduction of thiols was found when nitrifying sludge was incubated at 25 degrees C, and the reduction was significant at 15 degrees C. At 10 degrees C, the nitrifying bacteria lost the capacity to reduce thiols, but the oxidation of thiols was observed. At 30 degrees C, the thiols of nitrifying bacteria were fully oxidized. The rapid loss of thiols at low temperatures may result from the loss of cytoplasmic membrane enzymes. The loss of nitrifying capacity at low temperatures could be due to the oxidized thiols.Read local reports on the Vancouver News B.C. government to block homeless housing if earthquake is detected The province wants to inform the public if an earthquake is detected. B.C.'s government plans to block homeless housing if an earthquake is detected in the future, if "significant damage" is reported from seismic testing in the area or if a quake is expected to trigger an avalanche on the Mount Washington side of the Cascades.
